NNABA LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

Phoenix, AZ. – The National Native American Bar Association (NNABA) recently relaunched its website, with a new design and structure to make it easier to share news about issues that impact Native Americans in the legal profession. The new site presents information in a more user-friendly and navigable interface, including sections about the NNABA's leadership, nationwide job announcements, initiatives, exciting new research project, judiciary project, and recognition of sponsors.

"This new website represents a significant step forward in NNABA's commitment to its members and in its efforts to serve as a national voice for the Native American legal community," said NNABA President Mary Smith.

Our new homepage reflects the most current news about NNABA and its initiatives. NNABA's website also has new functionality such as being able to pay membership dues and to sponsor NNABA's groundbreaking study of Native American attorneys via credit card.

Please visit NNABA's website at www.nativeamericanbar.org.

Founded in 1973, NNABA serves as the national association for American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian attorneys, judges, law professors and law students. NNABA strives for justice and effective legal representation for all American indigenous peoples; fosters the development of Native American lawyers and judges; and addresses social, cultural and legal issues affecting American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians.
